Returns:

1: Aric de la Flèche - New Name & New Device

Argent, a Roman letter A pierced by an arrow to dexter gules.

This name was pended on the January 2020 Letter of Decision in order to obtain documentation necessary to submit the name under the Legal Name Allowance. Unfortunately, as we have not heard back from the submitter, the name must be returned at this time.

As all armory must have a name under which to be registered, the device must also be returned at this time. Additionally, commenters expressed concern as to whether the device as drawn was blazonable, which should be taken into consideration on resubmission.

By giving permission for this device to be used in the Arms of the Society, I declare that I have read and understood
the Society's Armorial Rules and that I am satisfied with the proposed design.

2: Katrein Töpffer - New Device

This item was pended on the December 2019 Letter of Decision.

Per SENA A.2.C.2, “Elements must be drawn to be identifiable.” While by precedent “Crossing the legs of a polypus or calamarie is acceptable, as long as the identifiability of the charge is not diminished and there are no other issues,” (Gilbert Purchase, Feb 2014 via Lochac) in this case commenters agreed that the arms were in this instance crossed so many times as to render the polypus unidentifiable. A possible redraw was provided during commentary, but as we have been unable to contact the submitter for approval of this redraw, the device must be returned at this time.

By giving permission for this device to be used in the Arms
of the Society, I declare that I have read and understood
the Society's Armorial Rules and that I am satisfied
with the proposed design.

3: Roanna de Caerdydd - New Name & New Device

This name was pended on the January 2020 Letter of Decision to allow time to consult with the submitter regarding necessary changes to the spelling of the name, particularly the byname, based on available documentation. As we have been unable to reach the submitter, and she does not allow major changes, we must return the name at this time.

By giving permission for this device to be used in the Arms
of the Society, I declare that I have read and understood
the Society's Armorial Rules and that I am satisfied with the proposed design.
